A short comment on “this glad word” of Liber L vel Legis, II, 76.

Aye is the adverb “aye”, ever; always! Its pronunciation is thus [eɪ], and not [aɪ], aye or ay, yes! The “glad word” is thus pronounced in the same way as the letter ‘A’ [eɪ]! It is important to notice that Aleister Crowley in The Equinox of the Gods in 1937 E.V. wrote about the line found in Liber CCXX, II, 75: “Aye! listen to the numbers & the words:”, “I should not have spelt “Ay” “Aye,””! (EG, p. 106.). “Ay” is not found in Liber L vel Legis, and “aye” is found twice. I will later publish an essay on the meaning of Liber L vel Legis, II, 76, and the Magick of the “glad word” hidden there.

“What meaneth this, o prophet? Thou knowest not; nor shalt thou know ever. There cometh one to follow thee: he shall expound it. But remember, o chosen one, to be me; to follow the love of Nu in the star-lit heaven; to look forth upon men, to tell them this glad word.” (Liber L vel Legis, II, 76.)
